

A New You Tomorrow

newyoumusical.com | info@newyoumusical.com

by James Walker Reid & Julian Jahanpour

Act One

Beneath a starry sky in the Mojave desert, with dawn at the horizon, a herbalist opens her stall on a dusty roadside. She shakes a tamburello and sings. Two spirits appear. In a geologist's cabin, a rock at the foot of a bed pulses with an inner light. Adam sits up in terror, then throws himself to the floor. ("Night Fall")
(click/tap hyperlinks for online audio demos)

Aunt Theresa hangs overalls on a drying line ("Dry Land") then brings a tea tray to Adam in bed. She sympathises about his recurring bad dreams. Maybe the universe is trying to tell us something? She tries to move the rock but it is heavy, smelly, and interferes with the radio. After a struggle, they leave it.

Geologist Uncle Ernest and intern Georgie sort meteorites into buckets. Space-rock business is not good. Perhaps Adam has some online marketing ideas? They make a promotional video for the website. ("Hicksville Rocks"). Their landlord visits, military intelligence officer (and chef) Major Don, with export permits and bad news. He's been using a budget for secret research on their behalf, now being audited by the Mexican Pentagon, and they need to produce a scientific breakthrough by the end of the week or they will be shut down. Don suggests they fake DNA on a meteorite. ("Spice it Up!")

Under a spectacular desert night sky, Adam reads a newspaper, sad about his parents' recent divorce, but inspired by a solitary star. He goes to bed. ("Little Star")

While Adam sleeps, the rock at the foot of his bed again begins to glow again. ("Visitation Zero"). A masked figure in a jumpsuit, enters through the wardrobe. Adam sits up, scared, but determined this time to engage. ("The Eyes"). "Acceptance?" projects the figure telepathically, and tries to sedate Adam with a high-tech spear, the Fazer. But interference from the rock causes malfunction. Adam turns the light on and accidentally zaps the figure with their own fazer – twice! "Acceptance!" says the figure, removing their helmet to reveal Auriga, a human with blonde hair (whatever their ethnicity, the hair is genetically-engineered blonde). Under the influence of the fazer, Auriga falls temporarily magically in love with Adam. They hold hands and fly into a romantic out-of-body space experience. ("Clear Sky")

Next morning, they wake up together in bed. Adam is happy. Auriga plays it cool and leaves in a hurry. ("New You Tomorrow")

Days later, the team tests space-rocks in a DNA scanner. Adam sulks. Maybe he imagined the magical night? Major Don says it's better to crash and burn than never make a connection. ("Don't Look Down"). Dr Rucola hypnotises Adam to unlock memories. ("Mystery Box")

In a vision, Auriga swings on a crescent moon and reflects. The night was a silly mistake, but it has sparked something in her. ("Why Did You?")

Dr Rucola is sceptical about lack of proof and tells Adam to grow up. Theresa is open-minded. ("Infinite") and suggests they look for a clue. They find a blonde hair with a date in its DNA: 2099. Auriga is from the future! Major Don sends the DNA data to the lab. They approve new funding. Hicksville Rocks is saved! Adam has proof that Auriga is real, and is determined to be ready for future visits. ("Wow!")

Act Two

On a spaceship, Professor Lovelock teaches children how genetically-engineered people in 2099 are sterile, with babies only possible by cloning. They are on a time-travel mission to scan unmodified human DNA without changing history. Auriga enters, late for work. They are joined by mid-life male, Rex, and glamorous gender-fluid assistant, Glen. Rex dominates the meeting. ("The Man"). Lovelock criticizes Rex's irresponsible methods which risk history collapse. Auriga reluctantly reports the close encounter with Adam. Rex tells Glen to prepare an extraction team. This time we do it "my way".

Night in Adam's bedroom, the rock glows. ("Visitation One"). Adam is awakened by a figure emerging from the wardrobe, happily thinking it's Auriga, then shocked to see Glen, and the Little Helpers. They tell Adam to get ready for the probe. ("Alien Love"). Rex enters wearing a lizard head-dress and ceremonial robes, wielding a fazer staff, to zap Adam, himself, and the little helpers. Aunt Theresa enters and turns the lights on. Rex zaps her too. Auriga enters to prevent the impending abduction of Adam and Theresa. Rex suggests they move the party to his spaceship "The One" and performs incantations over a keytar solo. ("Get on The One"). Suddenly the power goes out. They're busted by Mexican agents led by Major Don. Rex's spaceship has been seen. History is collapsing. Auriga uses the fazer to subdue everyone. Adam protests the lab has the DNA evidence and he loves Auriga. Auriga says they need to talk. But first they must time-travel to last week, to retrieve the hair. They exit through the wardrobe. Rex is left behind, captured.

Astronauts Nina and Gina struggle to control the Mothership, rocked by time-travel turbulence. Adam's presence onboard is causing a dangerous double paradox. Adam attempts to be a hero by ejecting through an airlock. ("Storm in a Spaceship")

Suspended in time, Adam floats in space. Spirits approach, inviting him to surrender to death. Adam weakly fights back with rocks floating nearby ("Midnight Lake"). Gaia the earth goddess intervenes to show Adam a vision of humanity's development and current ecological madness, and gives him a message to bring home: Life on earth requires action now. ("Come Back in Time") Left alone, Adam apologises to his lucky star, realising that, however small we feel, everyone must make a difference. He notices the space-rocks he's grasping are similar to the one in his bedroom ... and banging them together emits energy. The Mothership passing through the wormhole detects the energy signal and navigates an asteroid field to rescue Adam. ("Mothership"). Now we have some stops to make, says Auriga.

In an interrogation room, Rex, bearded and sorry for himself, is chained to a table and wired to a lie-detector. Major Don recounts Rex's substantial intervening time and bad behaviour in various prisons. Enter Rex's lawyer - Glen - with a parole application. The lie detector confirms Rex has learned the error of his ways. ("Old Enough") Major Don agrees to release Rex. Glen gives Don a wrapped space-rock sample from Adam.

Adam and Auriga return to the night they met, to correct the fazer malfunction. ("Visitation Zero Reprise") Auriga promises to never forget Adam. The timeline resets.

Theresa and Ernest light candles and hang decorations for the winter solstice. Indoors, Georgie reads to Adam unconscious in bed who wakes up, glad to be home with a new understanding. ("Blessed") Carol singers visit. ("Ding Dong"). They are Lovelock, Rex, Glen, and the Spirits (Nina & Gina) disguised as Swedish hippies. Auriga appears, visibly pregnant. "Did I do that?" asks Adam. "You did everything you needed to" explains Auriga. The mothership's mission is complete. Everyone assures Adam they'll all feel fine about this eventually. Auriga says goodbye and all exit except Lovelock. Georgie tells to Adam to look for romance nearer home. They dance. Enter Major Don, carrying the special space-rock sample. and tells them to turn on the TV. ("Later") The President of the United Nations announces a major prize for Adam and the team, for discovering a bacteria from space on the glowing rocks that is a new clean energy source and inspiration for international collaboration and innovation. It's world peace in a chunk! They party. ("Hunkafunk")